synopsis:

We live in a 'me first' society. The world encourages us to think of ourselves first and others . . . well, rarely. We can sometimes be so consumed with this mentality that we even expect our church to cater to us.

In portraying these ridiculous requests, this vignette serves as a humorous reminder that we should not be asking our church to serve us. But rather, we should eliminate our grumblings about the style of music, the size of the congregation or other issues remembering that Christ can to serve not to be served.

discussion questions:

- How have you served your church lately?
- Do you feel inconvenienced at times by your church?
- How do you respond when you would like something changed at your church?
